

DECLARATIONS OF FORGIVENESS

It is time for you to forgive yourself and change the narrative about your past. Right here, we are straightening your crown and realigning your purpose posture. Continuing to entertain inner and outer dialogues about who you are from the vantage point of the unfavorable places you have walked through will keep you tethered to the destructive patterns of your old experiences. It also creates a point of access for the enemy to slither his way back in and deceive you again and again. Forgiving yourself severs the umbilical cord.

Add this to your wheelhouse of purpose clarity for the days you don't feel like the capable queen you really are.

I declare that . . .

my setbacks have set me up to be set forth in a greater measure of my purpose.

I have dominion over the place I presently occupy.

I cannot lose.

Fear won't block my purpose.

Mistakes won't cancel my purpose.

Lack won't limit my purpose.

I walk in confidence!

I am victorious!

I am blessed to overflowing!

In Jesus' name, amen.

Taken from Courage and Confidence: A Bold Guide to Unboxing Who You Were Created to Be by Nicole O. Salmon © 2023. Used by permission of NavPress. All rights reserved. Represented by Tyndale House Publishers, Inc.

