

3 MYTH BUSTERS

and a Prayer About Moving On

Here are some myth busters about moving on you need to know if you are going to find the courage to move on in obedience and not shelter what needs to be severed:

- 1 Moving on is not an indictment of the people and places you are leaving. It is an indication that you are healing and hearing from God concerning your next steps.
- 2 The feeling of I've outgrown this relationship is not an insult. It can be articulated as "I need something else" over "I need something better," or "I need you and . . ." instead of "I need more."
- 3 You are not responsible for helping someone else sort through how they feel about you ending the relationship. Let go of that sense of responsibility to soothe those you move on from.

Father, I am thankful that if anyone knows what it feels like to have to obey a hard request, it is You. Help us activate the holy boldness required to step out of what is familiar and move in radical faith as You align us with a greater measure of our purpose.

In Jesus' name, amen.

Taken from Courage and Confidence: A Bold Guide to Unboxing Who You Were Created to Be by Nicole O. Salmon © 2023. Used by permission of NavPress. All rights reserved. Represented by Tyndale House Publishers, Inc.

